PARTNERSHIP FOR PUBLIC SERVICE STATEMENT ON VICE PRESIDENTIAL DEBATE

WASHINGTON – Partnership for Public Service President and CEO Max Stier stated the following after the vice presidential debate at Longwood University in Farmville, Virginia:

“The next administration will have the challenge and the opportunity to improve the delivery of services to the American people, from veterans health care to meeting the needs of small businesses. It is promising that vice presidential candidates Tim Kaine and Mike Pence have management experience as governors. If elected, both men will be well-positioned to serve as a White House champion for good management, providing the clout needed to make sure agencies are effectively implementing federal programs and policies.”
